TSA is Looking for a Few Good Men and Women to be Part-time Security Screeners for Washington Dulles airports

The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) is actively seeking people who are looking to serve their country as part-time federal security screeners at airports for Washington-Dulles International Airport (IAD), Herndon, VA. Today's announcement is part of a sophisticated, targeted approach for TSA's ongoing screener recruitment. Interested candidates can apply at www.tsa.gov and then click on "Employment"; or <https://tsacareers.recruitsoft.com/>.

"TSA must maintain an effective screener workforce and the hiring of part-time screeners will give us the flexibility needed to ensure the security of traveling public," said Adm. James M. Loy, Administrator of TSA.

"After completing our assessment of the screener workforce here at Washington-Dulles, it was determined that additional part-time screeners to cover peak times would both reduce wait-time at the checkpoints and enhance customer service to better serve the community," said Scott McHugh, Federal Security Director at Washington-Dulles International Airport.

The annual salary of a full time transportation security screener ranges from $23,600 to $35,400 depending upon experience, plus locality pay; part-time security salaries will depend upon a screener's work schedule. In addition, security screeners receive federal benefits including health insurance, life insurance, retirement, paid vacation and sick leave. (Part-time screeners are eligible for health insurance and life insurance coverage. The amount of the premium is based upon work schedule.)

All candidates by law must meet the following minimum requirements:

- U.S. citizenship or U.S. national;
- High school diploma, GED or equivalent, or one year of security or aviation screening experience;
- English proficiency; and
- Pass a background check

Transportation security screener duties include providing frontline security and protection of travelers, airports and airplanes by identifying dangerous objects in baggage and on passengers in a courteous and professional manner. They also are responsible for preventing those objects from being transported onto aircraft by utilizing diverse, cutting edge electronic detection and imaging equipment.
